Rev. W. W. Moore Preached Powerful Sermon At First Union Meeting

There was a good attendance despite the threatening weather at the first union service Sunday evening. It was held in the First Baptist church, the excellent program being carried out as published in the Telegraph except for one change. Dr. Altman read the scripture lesson.

Many of the church-goers of the city had a chance to hear Rev. W. W. Moore of First Christian church, the first time, because he is comparatively a new minister in the city. He is a man of eminently practical type, yet he is unlike the average preacher in the manner of delivery. He began his sermon by stating that it would be a simple gospel message; then he proceeded to preach one of the most powerful sermons ever delivered from the Baptist pulpit. He admitted that he had preached in practically all the denominational pulpits, but this was his first attempt to preach from a Baptist pulpit. He at once aroused the interest of the auditors by saying his father was a Methodist preacher, his brother a Baptist minister and his sister a Presbyterian, while he was a Christian. He appeared in the garb of an up-

ANOTHER SLACKER IS PICKED UP IN AMBOY

ROBT. BURTON, HOBO, THOUGHT HE COULD ESCAPE THE REGISTRATION.

TAKEN TO FREEPORT TODAY

Sheriff Phillips went to Freeport this morning with Robert Burton, a "bum" who claims Sidney, O., as his home and who was picked up as a slacker by Officer Joe Brierton of Amboy last night. The fellow admitted he had not registered and said he thought he would be able to avoid it as he was traveling all the time. As he could show no registration card, he was arrested and this afternoon he will be arraigned before either the United States commissioner or Judge Landis at Freeport.

Mr. Brierton thought he had another slacker in the person of Kenneth Wright of Muscatine, Ia., who is employed on the paving contract in Amboy and who could not show a certificate. He was also brought to Dixon by the officer, but his claim that he had registered in Muscatine was substantiated by a telephone call to that city, and he was released.

CHILD NEAR DEATH ON RAILROAD BRIDGE

FLOYD PASSMORE, AGED SEVEN, WAS TRAPPED THERE BY FREIGHT TRAIN.

ENGINEER TOOK BIG CHANCES

But for the prompt action of Engineer Frank Calkins of northbound Illinois Central freight train No. 192, Floyd Passmore, a lad of seven years, would have met a tragic death on the railroad bridge over Rock river Saturday afternoon, for the little fellow was trapped helplessly on the high structure when the local freight pulled onto it at 3 o'clock.

The child was at about the middle of the bridge when the train, in charge of Conductor O'Rourke and Engineer Calkins, ran onto it. Bewildered and frightened, he stood helplessly between the rails.

Horrorstricken, Engineer Calkins applied the emergency brakes and reversed the ponderous locomotive, taking desperate chances on derailing the engine on the bridge, but the heroic measure brought the heavy train to a standstill less than five feet from the child. The boy was put on the train, which was backed up so he could be let off on the south side.

Regulations Tell of Men Drawn Who Will Receive Exemption In Draft

Rules Laid Down by President Give Local Boards Exact Instructions to Follow In Every Case

Men Who Have Dependents, Office Holders, Munition and Mail Workers Are Some Who Will Be Out of It

THESE CLASSES EXEMPT: STATUS MUST BE PROVED

These classes are exempt from draft upon proof of their status:

- Men indispensable to industries necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the national interest.
- Men with wives, children, parents, brothers or sisters dependent solely upon them for support.
- Members of recognized religious sects whose creed forbids bearing arms, students of divinity, ordained or regular ministers.
- Legislative, judicial and executive officers of the United States or the states of the Union.
- Men in the army or navy of the United States.
- Germans and aliens who have not taken out first citizenship papers.
- Workmen in the armories, arsenals and navy yards of the United States and men engaged in the transmission of the United States mails.
- Pilots and mariners in the merchant marine of the United States.
- Criminals convicted of felonies.

THE regulations which will guide the local boards in deciding who will be exempt and who will not after the names have been drawn for the draft have been very comprehensively laid down by President Wilson. Only 625,000 men are to be called—an army of 500,000 and 125,000 reserves—but army officers argue that the additional men should know in advance of the likelihood of summons to service. After the selection has been made the men will probably be called to the colors Sept. 1.

The regulations issued prescribe more speedy work than had been expected. Three days are allowed to the local boards to make up their lists, ten days for physical examinations and ten days for hearing claims to exemption.

Call Not by Alphabet.

Those on the registration lists are not to be called alphabetically, but serially. The cards turned over to the local boards are numbered consecutively as received. Within three days after this has been done notices are to be mailed to the first third of the list requiring them to report for physical examination on the morning of the fifth day following, for the second third to report on the sixth day and for those remaining to report on the seventh day.

To make it possible to examine the number of men who will appear in such populous communities as New York, for example, one examining physician in addition to the one who belongs to the local board is to be named if the number to be examined on any one day shall exceed eighty, two if the number exceeds 120, with others in like ratio. One member of the board other than the medical member must be present at each examination, and no member or physician may serve where the person to be examined is of nearer kin to him by blood or marriage than second cousin.

A registered man who may be absent from his home area on the day he was notified to appear must make application, "supported by satisfactory proof," for examination before another board. If a registered man is ill he must give proof of this, one affidavit at least coming from a licensed physician, and in such cases the local board may require examination by one of its own physicians. Those who do not furnish such proof within ten days are to "be recorded as physically qualified."

Classes of Exemptions.

The regulations tell the circumstances in which persons may be exempted. The classes include officers of the United States and of the several states, territories and the District of Columbia; ministers of religion, students of divinity, persons in the military or naval service of the United States, subjects of Germany residing in the United States and all other resident aliens who have not taken out their first papers.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that "the statement on the registration of any such person that exemption is claimed shall not be construed or considered as the presentation of a claim for exemption." These claims must be made in the form of affidavits or such other evidence as may be required by the local boards within ten days after the physical examinations.

Officers who may claim exemption are defined as including "any legislative, executive or judicial officer." These must name and describe the offices they hold, the dates on which they were elected or appointed and when their terms of office expire.

Ministers who may claim exemption must be "duly ordained" or "regular." They must file affidavits "giving the name of church, religious sect or organization" in which they have been ordained or to which they belong, giving the dates of their ordination or the beginning of their ministry. Each affidavit must be accompanied by two supporting affidavits from heads of families living in the local area and belonging to the minister's church, sect or organization.

"A duly ordained minister of religion," the regulations say, "is a person who has been ordained in accordance with the ceremonial, ritual or discipline of a church, religious sect or organization established on the basis of a community of faith and belief, doctrines and practices of a religious character, to preach and to teach the doctrines of such church, sect or organization and to administer the rites and ceremonies thereof in public worship, and who as his regular and customary vocation preaches and teaches the principles of religion and administers the ordinances of public worship as embodied in the creed or principles of such church, sect or organization."

Preachers Not Ordained.

A regular minister is one who "as his customary vocation preaches and teaches the principles of religion of a church, sect or organization of which he is a member without having been duly ordained as a minister of religion and who is recognized by such church, sect or organization as a regular minister." Neither of these classes include those who "irregularly or incidentally preach and teach." Students of divinity to claim exemption must have been enrolled in a recognized theological or divinity school on May 18 last and must present supporting affidavits by the president, dean or head of the school.

"Persons in the military or naval service of the United States" embraces those within the classes defined at the time of the registration. Germans and "all other resident aliens who have not taken out their first papers" come within the mandatory rules of exemption. As to the former it is added:

"No subject of Germany residing in the United States, whether he has taken out his first papers or not, will be accepted for service. When in the opinion of a local board any person called for service is a subject of Germany, whether he has or has not declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States or whether he is or some other person in respect of him has or has not filed a claim of exemption, he shall be exempted and a certificate of exemption issued to him."

Not all exemptions allowed by the local boards will be absolute. "No exemption shall continue when a cause therefor no longer exists," the regulations declare, and when the cause ceases the certificate is to be revoked. The provost marshal general is empowered to name representatives, who may take appeals from the local boards to the district boards, which are to sit in New York city and in each federal judicial district. Appeals from district boards may be taken to the president, and individuals have the same right of appeal that the provost marshal general has.

Subject to Discharge.

This right of appeal covers discharges as well as exemptions. Discharges must be applied for within seven days after notice to appear for examination has been mailed. The classes who may obtain discharges include custom house clerks, persons employed in the transmission of the mails, artificers and workmen employed in the armories, arsenals and navy yards of the United States, persons employed in the service of the United States designated by the president to be exempted, pilots, mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the country.

With the exception of pilots, who must have affidavits from the collector or deputy collector of the port from which they regularly sail—all these persons must submit affidavits from responsible officers that they cannot be "replaced by another person without substantial material loss of efficiency in operation or administration" of the service in which the applicant may be employed.

The regulations affecting "those in a status with respect to persons dependent upon them for support which renders their exclusion or discharge desirable" require 8,500 words for their setting forth. Applications for discharge under these heads may be made by the man himself, by the dependent or by some person acting for him. The classes are the following:

"Any married man whose wife or child is dependent upon his labor for support." Such a man must present, within ten days after filing a claim for discharge, an affidavit signed by him, giving his name, age and place of residence; the name and place of residence of his wife; the name(s), age(s) and place of residence of his child or children, if any, and stating that he is a married man, the husband of said wife, the father of her child or children; that such wife, child or children is (are) dependent upon his labor for support as the term "labor" is used in the rules and regulations; that his income from which such wife and child, or children, received such support was mainly the fruit of his mental or physical labor and was not mainly derived from property or other sources independent of his mental or physical labor.

A supporting affidavit must be given by the wife, in which she sets forth "the approximate amount of her separate income and the independent income of their child or children during the last preceding year, exclusive of any sums received from her husband and exclusive of any gifts to her or her child or children, the same being merely the income derived from the separate or independent income property of, or property held in trust for, her, the child or children."

When a wife files a supporting affidavit it must be upheld by an affidavit from a head of a family residing in the local area. When a wife does not support, but herself makes application for a husband's discharge she must cover the same ground and have two supporting affidavits from heads of families residing in the local area, unless the wife lives outside this area, in which case the affidavits may come from the area in which she lives.

When neither the wife nor the husband makes the application it may be made by some one "personally well acquainted with such husband and his wife, child or children," who has "personally made an investigation of the sources of income of the wife." The person filing such an application must present therewith the marriage certificate or a certified copy of it, or submit the affidavits of two persons who were present when the marriage took place.

Similar procedure must be followed in the case of "any son of a widow dependent upon his labor for support," and in the case of the "son of aged or infirm parent or parents dependent upon his labor for support," for the "father of a motherless child or children under sixteen years of age dependent upon his labor for support," and for the "brother of a child or children under sixteen years of age who has (have) neither father nor mother and is (are) dependent upon his (her) labor."

What Labor Is.

"Labor" is defined in this way: "For the purpose of these rules and regulations 'labor' shall be construed to mean bodily or mental exertion. It may be either physical or intellectual; it may be professional, mechanical, commercial, clerical or agricultural, and each of these forms of labor may exist under modifications or in combination with each other. The means for the support of the dependent or dependents must be produced by this labor, whatever its character. It need not be wholly produced from it, but it must be mainly so. A dependent receiving support from a person whose income is derived from dividends or rents cannot be said to be dependent upon his labor, but if that income were entirely the fruit of professional or physical toil then such person would be dependent upon his labor."

"For the purpose of these rules and regulations," it is added, "by the term 'aged or infirm' parent or parents is meant those persons who from old age and infirmity are disabled from earning the means of supporting themselves and who by reason of such age or infirmity have become dependent for the means of support upon the person in respect of whom the claim is made.

"If any person claiming exemption or discharge shall file affidavits in support thereof, one such affidavit should contain the statement that he binds himself to report at once in person to the local board by which he was called and notify it whenever the conditions entitling him to exemption or discharge cease to exist."

Conscientious objectors must, within ten days after filing their claims, present affidavits setting forth:

That the applicant "is a member in good faith and in good standing of a well recognized religious sect or organization (giving the name thereof) organized and existing May 18, 1917, and whose then existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form, and that the religious convictions are against war or participation therein, in accordance with the principles of said organization."

Must Support Contentions.

This must be supported by an affidavit from the clerk or minister of the organization, and "in case any such person substantiates in the opinion of the local board his claim, such local board shall issue a certificate stating that such person shall not be required or compelled to serve in any capacity except in some capacity declared by the president to be noncombatant."

"Those found to be morally deficient" are to be discharged "upon presentation by any person to the local board by which he was drawn for service of a certificate of the clerk of any court of record in the United States showing that the record of such court discloses that such person was at a time stated convicted of felony and sentenced in such court."

The district boards provided for are to have reviewing powers for the most part. They will, however, have original authority in the matter of "all questions or claims for including or excluding or discharging persons arising under the following provisions of the act of congress authorizing the president to exclude or discharge persons engaged in industries, including agriculture, found to be necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the effective operation of the military forces or the maintenance of national interest during the emergency."

All claims of this sort must be supported by affidavits setting forth that the applicant "is actually engaged in a particular, designated industrial enterprise necessary to any of the three things stated in the act; that his continuance therein is necessary to the maintenance thereof and that he cannot be replaced by another person without direct substantial material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of the enterprise in which he is engaged."

Sterling Gazette: One of the prettiest weddings of the season occurred early Saturday evening at the home of the bride, at 1402 East Fourth street, Sterling, when Miss Flora Marie Taylor, youngest daughter of the late Mrs. Anna Taylor, became the bride of Earle Dean Stitzel, of Nelson, Ill.

While the guests were assembling, Mrs. Clarence Stitzel, cousin of the groom, played the Bridal Chorus from Tannhauser and with Miss Agnes Little at the piano, sang beautifully, "I Love You Truly." Promptly at eight-thirty, Mrs. Stitzel struck the chords of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and the couple descended the stairs. They were preceded by little Fern Goeke dressed in white with a pink sash and hair bow who carried the ring in a pink rose and scattered rose petals before the bride.

Rev. J. C. Harris, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church, awaited the party beneath a beautiful bower of green and white in the parlor. Here the marriage rites were read, the ring service being used. During the ceremony Mrs. Stitzel played softly Mendelssohn's wedding march. The bride was lovely in a simple gown of white silk embroidered with georgette crepe over white silk and full length tulle veil set with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley and wore a cameo la valiere, a gift of the groom.

Following the congratulations a three-course luncheon was served by the Misses Agnes and Irene Goeke, Emily Little and Maybelle Stitzel, intimate friends of the bride, Mrs. Geo. Thomas, catered.

The bride's colors, pink and white, were used in the table decorations. The cake, in those colors, made a pretty center for the bride's table. Streamers of pink and white intertwined with smilax dropped from the chandelier to each side of the table and a white bell was suspended above it.

The house was fragrant with lilies, roses and peonies, for which smilax, ferns and palms formed the background.

Mr. and Mrs. Stitzel left late Saturday night for an extended trip in the west. They will spend some time in Nebraska and Colorado at Denver and Colorado Springs. They will be at home to their friends after August 1st in Nelson, Ill., where Mr. Stitzel is associated with his father in the grocery business.

Mrs. Stitzel is well known in the Twin Cities. She is a member of the choir of St. John's Lutheran church, and was society editor of The Daily Gazette for several months, having resigned the position only a month ago.

Mr. Stitzel also has many friends in this vicinity, who will hasten to extend congratulations and wish the young couple a bright and happy future.

The guests, numbering forty, were relatives and immediate friends. Those from out-of-town were: Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Stitzel, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stitzel, Miss Maybelle Stitzel and Mrs. G. G. Stewart, Nelson, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson, of Milledgeville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Stitzel of Nelson.

LEMONS BRING OUT THE HIDDEN BEAUTY

Make this lotion for very little cost and just see for yourself.

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way. Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quart of skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

Mr. Derwent is employed at the Illinois Central railroad shops in Amboy.

A WOMAN'S VOCATION

One of our modern writers has said, "A woman is as efficient in business as a man—when she is." The reason why sometimes she is not so efficient is that her health may fail. But the wise business woman knows now what to do when attacked by the ailments peculiar to the so-called "weaker sex". That greatest of all remedies for woman's ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has been freeing women from such ailments for forty years. Try it, if you suffer from such an ailment, and insure your competency and efficiency in the business world.

POLITICAL UNREST IS SHAKING 2 EMPIRES

Austria Forming New Ministry; Anti-Prussianism Grows.

London, July 10.—Political developments of great importance are under way in both Germany and Austro-Hungary with peace as the underlying factor in the situation.

In the dual monarchy the Hungarians are reported as bitterly resenting German domination of their country, while in Austria Emperor Charles has been unable to bring the different parties together sufficiently to organize a permanent cabinet.

The Austrian cabinet, the Lokai Anzeiger of Berlin says, has decided to resign. A new ministry (it adds, already is in course of formation.

In Berlin opposition to the predominance of Prussia in the bundesrat and reichstag is reported as growing, and it is known that Kaiser Wilhelm, Field Marshal Hindenburg and Ludendorff and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg have just ended a conference at which the latter's speech in the reichstag was carefully scrutinized.

BACK TO THE OLD DAYS.

A movement to increase the food supply of the nation by the home drying of vegetables and fruits is illustrative of the manner in which war's necessities serve to revive the primitive virtues, says the Washington Post.

No one who can recall the older days will fail to remember the part played by the desiccated and dehydrated products of the orchard and garden in the menu of winter. To them will also come a vision of wooden trays on the roofs of the old smokehouse and the makeshift lean-to where the summer kitchen held forth, with the shiny tinware on whitewashed walls and an air of coolness and cleanness all around. This was made more palpable by the tin wash basin outside on the stoop just beneath the oxheart cherry tree, whose branches swept the windowless aperture, while the cake of yellow soap, the little cracked mirror against the wall, and the roller towel bespoke a period when the entire household, from the head of the family to the hired man, dealt only in germs of the most unquestionable respectability.

There were apple cuttings and corings, the Bellflower and Maiden Blush resting in thin slices side by side on the trays, and the yellowjackets and brown hornets coming from afar to sip the exuding juices. Just before the tassel had dried, while the sweet corn was yet in the milk, a sharp knife sliced the white grains from the cob and these, too, were spread on trays, while the leftover went to feed the cows, whose soft eyes rolled heavenward in a state of ecstasy, believing the thought that the milk pail would be overturned by a sideswipe of the right hind foot a few minutes later. What familiar demon possesses a cow that she should always delay this operation until the pail is practically filled?

And that wasn't all by any means. Here was apple butter, stirred with a long-handled ladle in a copper kettle in the shade in the back yard, where the plantain fought every summer with the lawn grass. It was back-breaking labor and the smoke got in one's eyes, and apple butter making always came when swimmin' was best and fish were biting like anything. But it tasted scrumptious next winter. As for those little pear-shaped yellow tomatoes that mother used to preserve—

Bring back those old days again, say we, and make life worth the living once more! With the ancient doctrines restored to honor, no slacker can be found who wouldn't fight to death for the hearthstone, and there wouldn't be an old maid left in the land.—Freeport Journal-Standard.

THE DAIRY SITUATION.

Hoard's Dairyman recognizes the peril which besets the dairy industry in the temptation to escape a losing season by converting dairy cows into beef. While beef is at a premium the profit of exchanging a loss in furnishing milk into a profit through beef is more than many can resist. Result is the steady shrinking of the quota of milk cows.

If it were merely a matter of cutting off the unprofitable cows with the view of replacing them by a better breed that would be another thing. The sooner that is done the better off the dairyman and the consumer will be. But that is not the case. Fewer calves are being raised and fewer young cattle are found in the herds today than formerly. That is the testimony of reports from widely separated sections. Both tendencies run against the future of the milk supply. And what will it be when the herds of America have to be drawn on for replacing the lost herds of Germany and other parts of Europe? Are we facing a difficult situation that will remain for years?

GERMANY IS ABOUT DONE.

When German arms were in the ascendancy and the German lines were taking in more territory each week, German messages to the world at large were very pompous and confident. They meant to warn all neutrals that Prussian arms would dominate the world from now on and that German Kultur was to be forced down the throats of all mankind.

But now, with Russia coming strong from the east, Great Britain delivering giant blows and France also gaining ground on the west; with the United States preparing to step in and deliver the final blow, with the German peace party making itself felt so strongly from within, and with the new embargo on neutral shipping, the tail feathers of the German eagle look a little ragged. The imperial messages are losing their punch. The German military power is on the wane. Germany is on the run, and although Wilhelm don't know it, his crown is getting sadly out of date.

Internal unrest in Germany is becoming a factor which the imperial German government cannot overlook. Even the news received by the outside world shows that the political situation is becoming serious and that the autocratic power of the Hohenzollern family and the Prussian military chiefs is being threatened.

If young men can be conscripted, why cannot great fortunes be conscripted? The conscription of surplus wealth would not cause suffering.

And America's crops look better every day. America will feed the world this year.

BIG AMBOY FAIR TO BE HELD IN AUGUST

MANY HAVE GAINED WRONG IMPRESSION CONCERNING PROPOSED TAX.

Reports that, should the government pass the proposed bill to levy a 10% tax on the receipts of all race meetings, many associations would be unable to hold their fall meetings this year, have caused some people to think the Amboy fair was not to be held next month. Such an impression is not warranted by any stories that have appeared. The law has not yet been passed, therefore there is no tax provided against any of the fairs. The Amboy fair will positively be held next month.

TEN DAYS' SALE OF JEWELRY STOCK

F. Overstreet announces a ten days sale of jewelry, commencing today and closing Saturday night, July 21. A short time ago Mr. Overstreet closed his Hoopston store and after selling the fixtures moved the stock to the Dixon store, and since the present location is too small to accommodate both stocks and not wishing to have too much money tied up, he is holding the sale to reduce stock, and for no other reason. If the people of Dixon and vicinity desire bargains in jewelry, diamonds, cut glass, china or anything carried in an up to date store, this is your opportunity to make purchases for present uses or for the holidays, as the prices quoted are very low and in many instances, at cost.

GUARDSMEN KILLED 2 NEGROES IN RIOT

TESTIMONY AT CORONER'S INQUEST SHOWS THEY OBEYED POLICE OFFICER.

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

East St. Louis, July 10—Two negroes were shot and killed by Illinois guardsmen during rioting here July 2, it was testified at the secret session of the coroner's jury yesterday, according to information obtained today. The negroes were killed on order of the police sergeant, who said the negroes had fired at policemen and soldiers.

A man arrested by Capt. Smith of the Fourth infantry was released yesterday by the police, ostensibly "on the order of the states attorney." Capt. Smith asserted he heard the man say, "I killed my share of niggers today. I killed so many I am tired and somebody else can finish them."

United States Senator Lewis in a telegram today said he was in favor of a federal investigation.

own words: "I oftentimes purposed, but was let hitherto," and then he adds, "I am debtor both to the Greeks, and the Barbarians, both to the wise and the unwise. So as much as in me, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are in Rome."

Then he gave a definite reason why "It is the power of God unto salvation." The apostle could speak from experience and observation, to every one that believeth. The Romans prided themselves upon their power as a nation. They had conquered Northern Africa, their armies had swept over Europe, they had entered Asia and penetrated the valley of the Euphrates but the apostle believed that there was more power in the gospel of Christ than Rome possessed. There is enough power in the gospel to save men from sin, a Divine power that could triumph over the power of man, destined to reach not only the Roman empire, but the countries beyond.

Rome succeeded by military force in destroying the smaller countries, while the apostle taught the power of love, showing how the blind could receive their sight, the deaf hear, the lame walk and the poor have the gospel preached unto them. A power equal to the salvation from sin of the worst of men, a power to elevate society and enrich the manhood of the world. Not only able to save here and now but to save the people from destruction in the world to come.

At this point he called attention to the fact that the gospel of Christ is not limited to one country, but is universal in its saving power.

ANTI-JAP SENTIMENT NOT STRONG IN EAST

DISTINGUISHED ORIENTAL VISITOR TELLS OF OBSERVATIONS IN AMERICA.

Tokio, July 10.—That the anti-Japanese movement in the United States is not so strong as is believed by many in Japan is the opinion of Dr. Waichiro Okada, Professor of Medicine at the Imperial University, who recently returned from a trip to America. The professor said that the Japanese were welcomed in the United States, generally speaking.

It is true that among the labor element in the West the situation was different, but he found that the majority of the American people do not subscribe to the anti-Japanese agitation in Western states. He added that some of the American physicians were even suggesting medical cooperation between Americans and Japanese because Americans were recognizing that the Japanese possessed certain excellent qualities in medical science.

U. S. RIOT INQUIRY IS URGED BY SHERMAN

Suppression of Facts Seen in East St. Louis Probe.

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL., July 10.—Demands for a federal investigation of the race rioting which resulted in the slaughter of thirty-three negroes and four white men, took definite form when United States Senator Sherman of Illinois urged a federal inquiry. In a telegram to a St. Louis paper Senator Sherman said:

"I favor federal investigation in East St. Louis. I will recommend as requested that Judge Landis be designated to conduct the judicial inquiry if one shall be ordered by the department of justice and will recommend to the department such an inquiry." The telegram of Senator Sherman was in response to a dispatch informing him that many who saw the rioting hesitated to appear at an inquiry conducted by the East St. Louis local authorities and that there was a demand among the citizens for a federal inquiry under the direction of Judge Landis.

Washington, July 10.—Representative Dyer of Missouri introduced a joint resolution for a congressional inquiry on the race riots in East St. Louis. In the senate Senator Sherman submitted a resolution from the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce deploring the riots.

EXPECT AMERICANS TO MARRY ABROAD

LIVERPOOL POST SPECULATES ON CHANCES OF ENGLISH GIRLS.

(Associated Press) Liverpool, July 10.—Speculating editorially on whether the men of the American army will marry English wives to any appreciable extent, the Liverpool Post says:

"Will American men marry here? We wonder if the coming of the American army will have any effect upon the matrimonial prospects of our girls. For some reason the men of the New World have hitherto never manifested any great eagerness to take brides from the Old, and even the theory that this is because it has not been the way of the American man to cross the Atlantic, though it is consoling to our national vanity, does not work. For it is noticeable that the Canadians, who have abounded in our midst for the past three years, are not nearly as fond of marrying into this country as are for example, Australians.

"Few of the young men from Australia seem to want to return home without English brides, but the Canadians either are married when they come or show a disposition to remain single.

"Still, there is no need for the girls to despair yet, and if some of them do not spend their lives as matrons in the United States we shall be surprised. Certainly it will not be their fault, as they show a most amiable desire to like any of the American naval and military and medical men they have seen, although in some ways the fellow citizens of President Wilson are so curiously unlike our own men."

LEAD CONVINCED KAHLY OF MERITS

Tanlac's Relief Appreciated and Passed On to His Many Friends

Freeport, Ill., Samuel Kahly, 40, a prominent farmer residing at Cedarville, five miles north of here, is rejoicing over the fact that he has been relieved of trouble of twenty years duration. "And I owe it all to Tanlac," Mr. Kahly says.

"More than twenty years ago," he continued, "I began having trouble with my stomach and in the ensuing years I had tried practically every possible means for relief but without success. Everything I ate caused gas to form on my stomach, making me feel bloated. Often after meals I'd throw up everything I'd eaten.

"The statement of Mr. Lead in the local papers convinced me that Tanlac was the medicine for me and I bought a bottle. Well sir, I thoroughly enjoy every single one of my meals now. I can eat food which formerly caused my distress. I'm improved in every way and I give Tanlac all the credit. I'm satisfied that all who suffer as I do gain relief through this medicine."

Tanlac, the Master Medicine, is especially beneficial for stomach, liver and kidney trouble, catarrhal complaints, loss of appetite, nervousness and the like.

Tanlac is being introduced and explained in Dixon at Campbell & Son's Drug Store and in Franklin Grove at C. S. Ives Drug Store.

THE HILLMAN

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER I.

Louise was leaning back among the cushions of the motionless car. The moon had not yet risen, but a faint and luminous glow, spreading like a halo about the topmost peak of the ragged line of hills, heralded its approach. Her eyes swept the hillsides, vainly yet without curiosity, for any sign of a human dwelling. Her chauffeur and her maid stood talking heatedly together near the radiator.

Louise leaned forward and called to the chauffeur. "Charles," she asked, "what has happened? Are we really stranded here?" The man's head emerged from the bonnet. He came round to the side of the car.

"I am very sorry, madam," he reported, "but something has gone wrong with the engine. I shall have to take it to pieces before I can tell exactly what is wrong. It will take several hours and it ought to be done by daylight. Perhaps I had better go and see whether there isn't a farm somewhere near."

"And leave us here alone?" Aline exclaimed indignantly.

Her mistress smiled at her reassuringly. "What have we to fear, you foolish girl? For myself, I would like better than anything to remain here until the moon comes over the top of that round hill. But listen! There is no necessity for Charles to leave us."

They all turned their heads. From some distance behind there came, faintly at first, but more distinctly every moment, the sound of horse's hoofs. Louder and louder came the sound. Louise gave a little cry as a man on horseback appeared in sight at the crest of the hill. The narrow strip of road seemed suddenly dwarfed, an unreasonable portion of the horizon blotted out. In the half light there was something almost awesome in the unusual size of the horse and of the man who rode it.

"It is a world of goblins, this, Aline," her mistress exclaimed softly. "What is it that comes?"

"It is a human being, Dieu merci!" the maid replied, with a matter-of-fact little sigh of content.

A few moments later horse and rider were beside the car.

"Has anything happened?" the newcomer asked, dismounting and raising his whip to his cap.

"I have broken down," Louise said. "Please tell us what you would advise us to do. Is there a village near, or an inn, or even a barn? Or shall we have to spend the night in the car?"

"The nearest village," he replied, "is twelve miles away. Fortunately, my own home is close by. I shall be very pleased—I and my brother—if you will honor us. I am afraid I cannot offer you very much in the way of entertainment."

She rose briskly to her feet and beamed upon him.

"You are indeed a good Samaritan," she exclaimed. "A roof is more than we had dared to hope for, although when one looks up at this wonderful sky and breathes this air, one wonders, perhaps, whether a roof, after all, is such a blessing."

"It gets very cold toward morning," the young man said practically.

"Of course," she assented. "Aline, you will bring my dressing-bag and follow us. This gentleman is kind enough to offer us shelter for the night. Dear me, you really are almost as tall as you appeared!" she added, as she stood by his side. "For the first time in my life you make me feel undersized."

"You Are indeed a Good Samaritan."

He looked down at her, a little more at his ease now by reason of the friendliness of her manner, although he had still the air of one embarked upon an adventure, the outcome of which was to be regarded with some qualms. She was of little more than medium height, and his first impressions of her were that she was thin, and too pale to be good-looking; that her eyes were large and soft, with eyebrows more clearly defined than is usual among Englishwomen; and that she moved without seeming to walk.

"I suppose I am tall," he admitted, as they started on along the road. "One doesn't notice it around here. My name is John Strangeway, and our house is just behind that clump of trees there, on the top of the hill. We will do our best to make you comfortable," he added a little doubtfully; "but there are only my brother and myself, and we have no women servants in the house."

"A roof of any sort will be a luxury," she assured him. "I only hope that we shall not be a trouble to you in any way."

"And your name, please?" he asked. She was a little amazed at his directness, but she answered him without hesitation.

"My name," she told him, "is Louise."

He leaned down toward her, a little puzzled.

"Louise. But your surname?"

She laughed softly. It occurred to him that nothing like her laugh had ever been heard on that gray-walled stretch of mountain road.

"Never mind! I am travelling incognito. Who I am, or where I am going—well, what does that matter to anybody? Perhaps I do not know myself. You can imagine, if you like, that we came from the heart of your hills, and that tomorrow they will open again and welcome us back."

"I don't think there are any motor-cars in fairyland," he objected.

"We represent a new edition of fairy lore," she told him. "Modern romance, you know, includes motor-cars and even French maids."

"All the same," he protested, with masculine bluntness, "I really don't see how I can introduce you to my brother as 'Louise from fairyland.'"

She evaded the point.

"Tell me about your brother. Is he as tall as you, and is he younger or older?"

"He is nearly twenty years older," her companion replied. "He is about my height, but he stoops more than I do, and his hair is gray. I am afraid that you may find him a little peculiar."

Her escort paused and swung open a white gate on their left-hand side. Before them was an ascent which seemed to her, in the dim light, to be absolutely precipitous.

"It isn't so bad as it looks," he assured her, "and I am afraid it's the only way up. The house is at the bend there, barely fifty yards away. You can see a light through the trees."

"You must help me, then, please," she begged.

He stooped down toward her. She linked her fingers together through his left arm and, leaning a little heavily upon him, began the ascent. He was conscious of some subtle fragrance from her clothes, a perfume strangely different from the odor of the ghost-like flowers that bordered the steep path up which they were climbing. Her arms, slight, warm things though they were, and great though his own strength, felt suddenly like a yoke. At every step he seemed to feel their weight more insistent—a weight not physical, solely due to this rush of unexpected emotions.

She looked around her almost in wonder as her companion paused with his hand upon a little iron gate. From behind that jagged stretch of hills in the distance the moon had now appeared. Before her was a garden, austere-looking with its prim flower-beds, the trees all bent in the same direction, fashioned after one pattern by the winds. Beyond was the house—a long, low building, part of it covered with some kind of creeper.

As they stepped across the last few yards of lawn, the black, oak door which they were approaching suddenly opened. A tall, elderly man stood looking inquiringly into it. He shaded his eyes with his hands.

"Is that you, brother?" he asked doubtfully.

John Strangeway ushered his companion into the square, oak-paneled hall, hung with many trophies of the chase, a few oil-paintings, here and there some sporting prints. It was lighted only with a single lamp which stood upon a round, polished table in the center of the white-flagged floor.

"This lady's motor-car has broken down, Stephen," John explained, turning a little nervously toward his brother. "I found them in the road, just at the bottom of the hill. She and her servants will spend the night here. I have explained that there is no village or inn for a good many miles."

Louise turned graciously toward the elder man, who was standing grimly apart. Even in those few seconds, her quick sensibilities warned her of the hostility which lurked behind the tightly closed lips and steel-gray eyes. His bow was stiff and uncordial, and he made no movement to offer his hand.

"We are not used to welcoming ladies at Peak Hall, madam," he said. "I am afraid that you will find us somewhat unprepared for guests."

"I ask for nothing more than a roof," Louise assured him.

John threw his hat and whip upon the round table and stood in the center of the stone floor. She caught a glance which flashed between the two men—of appeal from the one, of icy resentment from the other.

"We can at least add to the roof a bed and some supper—and a welcome," John declared. "Is that not so, Stephen?" The older man turned deliberately away. It was as if he had not heard his brother's words.

"I will go and find Jennings," he said. "He must be told about the servants."

Louise watched the disappearing figure until it was out of sight. Then she looked up to the face of the younger man, who was standing by her side.

"I am sorry," she murmured apologetically. "I am afraid that your brother is not pleased at this sudden intrusion. Really, we shall give you very little trouble."

He answered her with a sudden eager enthusiasm. He seemed far more natural then than at any time since he had ridden up from out of the shadows to take his place in her life.

"I won't apologize for Stephen," he said. "He is a little crochety. You must please be kind and not notice. You must let me, if I can, offer you welcome enough for us both."

CHAPTER II.

Louise, with a heavy, silver-plated candlestick in her hand, stood upon the uneven floor of the bedroom to which she had been conducted, looking up at the oak-framed family tree which hung above the broad chimney-piece. She examined the coat of arms emblazoned in the corner, and peered curiously at the last neatly printed addition, which indicated Stephen and John Strangeway as the sole survivors of a diminishing line. When at last she turned away, she found the name upon her lips.

"Strangeway!" she murmured. "John Strangeway! It is really curious how that name brings with it a sense of familiarity. It is so unusual, too. And what an unusual-looking person! Do you think, Aline, that you ever saw anyone so superbly handsome?"

The maid's little grimace was expressive.

"Never, madam," she replied. "And yet to think of it—a gentleman, a person of intelligence, who lives here all ways, outside the world, with just a terrible old man servant, the only do-mestic in the house! Nearly all the cooking is done at the bailiff's, a quarter of a mile away."

Louise nodded thoughtfully.

"It is very strange," she admitted. "I should like to understand it. Perhaps," she added, half to herself, "some day I shall."

She passed across the room, and on her way paused before an old cheval-glass, before which were suspended two silver candlesticks containing lighted wax candles. She looked steadfastly at her own reflection. A little smile parted her lips. In the bedroom of this quaint farmhouse she was looking upon a face and a figure which the illustrated papers and the enterprise of the modern photographer had combined to make familiar to the world—the figure of a girl, it seemed, notwithstanding her twenty-seven years. Her soft, white blouse was open at the neck, displaying a beautifully rounded throat. Her eyes dwelt upon the oval face, with its strong, yet mobile features; its lips a little full, perhaps, but soft and sensitive; at the masses of brown hair drawn low over her ears.

This was herself, then. How would she seem to these two men downstairs, she asked herself—the dour, grim master of the house, and her more youthful rescuer, whose coming had somehow touched her fancy? They saw so little of her sex. They seemed, in a sense, to be in league against it. Would they find out that they were entertaining an angel unawares?

She thought, with a gratified smile of her ingenuity. It was a real trial of her strength, this! When she turned away from the mirror the smile still lingered upon her lips, a soft light of anticipation was shining in her eyes.

John met her at the foot of the stairs. She noticed with some surprise that he was wearing the dinner-jacket and black tie of civilization.

"Will you come this way, please?" he begged. "Supper is quite ready."

He held open the door of one of the rooms on the other side of the hall, and she passed into a low dining room, dimly lit with shaded lamps. The elder brother rose from his chair as they entered, although his salutation was even grimmer than his first welcome. He was wearing a dress-coat of old-fashioned cut, and a black stock, and he remained standing, without any smile or word of greeting, until she had taken her seat. Behind his chair stood a very ancient manservant in a gray pepper-and-salt suit, with a white tie, whose expression, at the entrance of this unexpected guest, seemed curiously to reflect the inhospitable instincts of his master.

The table was laid with all manner of cold dishes, supplemented by others upon the sideboard. There were pots of jam and honey, a silver teapot and silver spoons and forks of quaint design, strangely cut glass, and a great Dresden bowl filled with flowers.

"I am afraid," John remarked, "that you are not used to dining at this hour. My brother and I are old-fashioned in our customs. If we had had a little longer notice—"

"I never in my life saw anything that looked so delicious as your cold chicken," Louise declared. "May I have some—and some ham? I believe that you must farm some land yourselves. Everything looks as if it were homemade or homegrown."

"We are certainly farmers," John admitted, with a smile, "and I don't think there is much here that isn't of our own production. The farm buildings are at some distance away from the house. There is quite a little colony at the back, and the woman who superintends the dairy lives there. In the house we are entirely independent of your sex. We manage, somehow or other, with Jennings here and two boys."

"You are not both woman-haters, I hope?"

Her younger host flashed a warning glance at Louise, but it was too late. Stephen had laid down his knife and fork and was leaning in her direction.

"Madam," he intervened, "since you have asked the question, I will confess that I have never known any good come to a man of our family from the friendship or service of women. Our family history, if ever you should come to know it, would amply justify my brother and myself for our attitude toward your sex."

"Stephen!" John remonstrated, a slight frown upon his face. "Need you weary our guest with your peculiar views? It is scarcely polite, to say the least of it."

The older man sat, for a moment, grim and silent.

"Perhaps you are right, brother," he admitted. "This lady did not seek our company, but it may interest her to know that she is the first woman who has crossed the threshold of Peak Hall for a matter of six years."

Louise looked from one to the other, half incredulously.

"Do you really mean it? Is that literally true?" she asked John.

"Absolutely," the young man assured her; "but please remember that you are none the less heartily welcome here. We have few women neighbors, and intercourse with them seems to have slipped out of our lives. Tell me, how far have you come today, and where did you hope to sleep tonight?"

Louise hesitated for a moment. For some reason or other, the question seemed to bring with it some disturbing thought.

"I was motoring from Edinburgh. As regards tonight, I had not made up my mind. I rather hoped to reach Kendal. My journey is not at all an interesting matter to talk about," she went on. "Tell me about your life here. It sounds most delightfully pastoral. Do you live here all the year round?"

"My brother," John told her, "has not been farther away than the nearest market town for nearly twenty years."

Her eyes grew round with astonishment.

"But you go to London sometimes?"

"I was there eight years ago. Since then I have not been further away than Carlisle or Kendal. I go into camp near Kendal for three weeks every year—territorial training, you know."

"But how do you pass your time? What do you do with yourself?" she asked.

"Farming," he answered. "Farming is our daily occupation. Then for amusement we hunt, shoot and fish. The seasons pass before we know it."

She looked appraisingly at John Strangeway. Notwithstanding his suntanned cheeks and the splendid vigor of his form, there was nothing in the least agricultural about his manner or his appearance. There was humor as well as intelligence in his clear, gray eyes. She opined that the books which lined one side of the room were at once his property and his hobby.

"It is a very healthy life, no doubt," she said; "but somehow it seems incomprehensible to think of a man like yourself living always in such an out-of-the-way corner."

John's lips were open to reply, but Stephen once more intervened.

"Life means a different thing to each of us, madam," he said sternly. "There are many born with the lust for cities and the crowded places in their hearts, born with the desire to mingle with their fellows, to absorb the conventional vices and virtues, to become one of the multitude. It has been different with us Strangeways."

Jennings, at a sign from his master, removed the tea equipage, evidently produced in honor of their visitor. Three tall-stemmed glasses were placed upon the table, and a decanter of port reverently produced.

Louise had fallen for a moment or two into a fit of abstraction. Her eyes were fixed upon the opposite wall, from which, out of their faded frames, a row of grim-looking men and women, startlingly like her two hosts, seemed to frown down upon her.

"Is that your father?" she asked, moving her head toward one of the portraits.

"My grandfather, John Strangeway," Stephen told her.

"Was he one of the wanderers?"

"He left Cumberland only twice during his life. He was master of hounds, magistrate, colonel in the yeomanry of that period, and three times refused to stand for parliament."

"John Strangeway?" Louise repeated softly to herself. "I was looking at your family tree upstairs," she went on. "It is curious how both my maid and myself were struck with a sense of familiarity about the name, as if we had heard or read something about it quite lately."

Her words were almost carelessly spoken, but she was conscious of the somewhat ominous silence which ensued. She glanced up wonderingly and intercepted a rapid look passing between the two men. More puzzled than ever, she turned toward John as if for an explanation. He had risen somewhat abruptly to his feet, and his hand was upon the back of her chair.

"Will it be disagreeable to you if my brother smokes a pipe?" he asked. "I tried to have our little drawing room prepared for you, but the fire has not been lit for so long that the room, I am afraid, is quite impossible."

"Do let me stay here with you," she begged, "and I hope that both of you will smoke. I am quite used to it."

John wheeled up an easy chair for her. Stephen, stiff and upright, sat on the other side of the hearth. He took the tobacco jar and pipe that his brother had brought him, and slowly filled the bowl.

"With your permission, then, madam," he said, as he struck a match.

Louise smiled graciously. Some instinct prompted her to stifle her own craving for a cigarette and keep her little gold case hidden in her pocket. All the time her eyes were wandering round the room. Suddenly she rose and, moving round the table, stood once more facing the row of gloomy-looking portraits.

"So that is your grandfather?" she remarked to John, who had followed her. "Is your father not here?"

He shook his head.

"My father's portrait was never painted."

"Tell the truth, John," Stephen enjoined, rising in his place and setting down his pipe. "We Strangeways were hillfolk and farmers, by descent and destiny, for more than four hundred years. Our place is here upon the land, almost among the clouds, and those of us who have realized it have led the lives God meant us to lead. There have been some of our race who have been tempted into the lowlands and the cities. Not one of them brought honor upon our name. Their pictures are not here. They are not worthy to be here."

Stephen set down the candlesticks and returned to his place. Louise, with her hands clasped behind her back, glanced toward John, who still stood by her side.

"Tell me," she asked him, "have none of your people who went out into the world done well for themselves?"

"Scarcely one," he admitted.

"Not one," Stephen interrupted. "Madam," he went on, turning toward Louise, "best my welcome to this evening should have seemed inhospitable, let me tell you this: Every Strangeway who has left our county, and trodden the downward path of failure, has done so at the instance of one of your sex. That is why those of us who inherit the family spirit look askance upon all strange women. That is why no woman is ever welcome within this house."

Louise resumed her seat in the easy chair.

"I am so sorry," she murmured, looking down at her slipper. "I could not help breaking down here, could I?"

"Nor could my brother fail to offer you the hospitality of this roof," Stephen admitted. "The incident was unfortunate but inevitable. It is a matter for regret that we have so little to offer you in the way of entertainment." He rose to his feet. The door had opened. Jennings was standing there with a candlestick upon a massive silver salver. Behind him was Aline. "You are doubtless fatigued by your journey, madam," Stephen concluded.

Louise made a little grimace, but she rose at once to her feet. She understood quite well that she was being sent to bed, and she shivered a little when she looked at the hour—barely ten o'clock. Yet it was all in keeping. From the doorway she looked back into the room, in which nothing seemed to have been touched for centuries. She stood upon the threshold to bid her final good-night, fully conscious of the complete anachronism of her presence there.

Her smile for Stephen was respectful and full of dignity. As she glanced toward John, however, something flashed in her eyes and quivered at the corners of her lips, something which escaped her control, something which made him grip for a moment the back of the chair against which he stood. Then, between the old manservant, who insisted upon carrying her candle to her room, and her maid, who walked behind, she crossed the white stone hall and stepped slowly up the broad flight of stairs.

UNCEASING MISERY

Some Dixon Kidney Sufferers Get Little Rest or Comfort

There is little sleep, little rest, little peace for many a sufferer from kidney trouble. Life is one continual round of pain. You can't rest at night when there's kidney backache.

You suffer twinges and "stabs" of pain, annoying urinary disorders, lameness and nervousness. You can't be comfortable at work with darting pains and blinding "dizzy spells. Neglect these ailments and serious troubles may follow. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at the first sign of disorder. Thousands have testified to their merit.

Proof of merit in this Dixon man's testimony:

John H. Fulk, 510 W. Seventh Street, says: "I am a shoe-cutter by trade and have to be standing in front of a cutting machine. There is a great deal of jarring in connection with this work and I am sure that is what caused my kidneys to get out of order. I was completely down and out and unable to work for ten days. I could hardly move, my back pained so terribly and I couldn't lift the least weight. The kidney secretions passed too freely and it was annoying to have to get up so often at night to pass them. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box at Prescott & Schildberg's Drug Store. After using them, the trouble disappeared."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fulk had. Foster-Milburn

Business last Monday was ver-dull in Harmon; very few came to town; all of the farmers were busy in the fields.

M. A. Watson of East Grove was a caller in Harmon Monday doing business.

George Saum was drawing hay
Monday.

Conner and Brill, the well men, are busy most of the time doing repair work on wells and windmills.

James Morrissey has been farming the George E. Ross place the past two years.

W. H. Smith was out on the telephone lines Monday.

John L. Porter says that he will soon have new potatoes of his own;
he has some as large as hilled walnuts; when they get that large they will be ready to use in a very few days.

Peter Blackburn was a caller in Harmon Monday.

Jacob Rhodenbaugh has the contract to put some new bridges in the township of Amboy.
